

Financial Aid Consortium Agreement
College of Southern Idaho and Lewis Clark State College
November 2, 2020

College of Southern Idaho (CSI) and Lewis-Clark State College (LCSC) are entering into a consortium agreement allowing CSI students to enroll for course work at LCSC and have those credits applicable to their overall financial aid eligibility at CSI.

The tenets of this consortium agreement are based on 2020 federal financial aid regulations. Updates to specific aspects of this agreement will be made if and as federal regulations change.

For the purpose of the agreement, CSI will be the home institution and LCSC will be the host institution. All courses may be funded by CSI. However, LCSC courses must be numbered below the level of 300 to be funded. The home institution (CSI) will be the student's degree or certificate granting institution. The total award will be disbursed by the home institution (CSI) through which the student is degree-seeking.

The institutions will reciprocally furnish proof of enrollment and cost to the financial aid administrators of the institutions, or as requested. The home institution (CSI) will disburse the financial assistance, monitor satisfactory progress, and administer refunds according to the institution's policy. The home institution (CSI) will perform Return to Title IV calculations for students who withdraw and/or do not earn any credits. The amount to be returned to the applicable federal program will be allocated on a prorated basis of the registration fees charged by each institution.

The following are policies and procedures to be used to implement the consortium agreement between the CSI and LCSC. This consortium agreement will assist students applying for financial aid that are enrolled at both institutions. Further changes in these policies and procedures may be made in writing by the Directors of Financial Aid at each institution as necessary to assure students receive the necessary financial assistance for enrollment.

1. Students will be responsible for completing the Concurrent Enrollment Certification Form. A new form is required for each semester the student is enrolled at both institutions. Forms are available on the LCSC Registrar's Office web page.
2. Students will be responsible for completing the Concurrent Enrollment Certification Form each semester and submitting it to the LCSC Registrar's Office from their LCMail email account.
3. The host institution (LCSC) will certify the total number and course level of enrolled credits for each student concurrently enrolled. This certification will include total charges owed to the host institution (LCSC) by each student and any additional financial assistance students may be receiving to pay for the

 10. The home institution's (CSI's) Financial Aid Office will be responsible for keeping the official student enrollment records to meet audit standards of the financial aid programs.
 11. Each institution will make their own determination of the students' obligation to reimburse the institution for returned funds. The home institution (CSI) will include direction for the student to contact the host institution (LCSC) regarding financial obligations. The decision to collect or write-off student debt will be determined by each institution.
